2013 has been filled with networking, sharing of information, businesses sharing resources, and eating crab together to raise money for excellence in scholarship. Chamber members are the leaders in our community. Together we are increasing our Return of Investment (ROI) and Value of Investment (VOI).

Networking Counts.

March began with the grand opening of Sterling Bank in Westlake Shopping Center, followed by drinking tea together at the Colma Historical Association Annual Tea. In April, we celebrated Small Business Week with three networking vignettes at Daly City AAA, South San Francisco Chevys Fresh Mex and Town of Colma Mancini’s Sleepworld; culminating with Business to Business (B2B) where Daly City/Colma Chamber members showcased their business products and services. With attendees from the business community and the public, the B2B certainly lived up to its promise of providing excellent opportunities for businesses to share their goods, gain exposure, creating awareness and fostering brand loyalty.

I am most appreciative to the generosity of our business community, our government officials and representatives, Chamber members, local service clubs and the Colma and Daly City residents for their generous contributions that enabled us to award scholarships to 40 students. Thank you our Sponsors for making this event possible. Senior Level Sponsors: Achievers Realty Group; Allied Waste; Allstate Insurance; California State Auto Assc.; Cypress Lawn; DeVry University; Dino & Georgette Sarles Foundation; Duggan’s Serra Mortuary; First National Bank of Northern California; Kaiser Permanente; Lucky Chances Casino; Macy’s; Moonstar Buffet; Recology; Robert Lagomariso Trust; Serramonte Center; Seton Medical Center; and Westlake Village Apartments. Health Care – Looking Forward to a Healthy Future
By Irwin Shelub, MD
Chief Medical Officer, Seton Medical Center

Discussions about the ever-changing landscape of health care and its delivery abound these days – from the signing of the Affordable Care Act to cuts in Medicare and Medi-Cal payments and increasing health coverage costs, and how these factors will impact our health and the health of our community.

Navigating these turbulent waters is challenging for all of us. At Seton Medical Center, though, one thing that remains steady is our unwavering commitment to our founders’ – the Daughters of Charity – Mission of caring for our entire community as we have done for the past 100 years. We continue to place our patients at the center of all we do, both internally and externally.

Even as we remain true to our legacy, we are continually driving to the future and inventing new ways to ensure the best health care for our patients and our diverse population throughout our community. We do this through enhancing internal operational efficiencies; among them are streamlining our admission process and incorporating electronic medical record systems to improve the efficient transmission of information to better serve our patients’ needs. We are also continually improving our clinical excellence. In fact, we have been recognized for excellence in cardiac care, spinal injuries, orthopedics, oncology, stroke care, women’s health services and robotic surgery.

We see ourselves as much more than a building to which we bring and treat sick people. We are an active community partner helping provide education and screenings in a myriad of venues to promote continuity of care and prevent diseases that lead to lengthy hospital stays.

As we continue to forge our future, we will continue to strengthen our physician and community relationships to lead the changes that ensure a patient-centered, integrated care delivery system in order to best serve our entire community.

Hello All!

Summer is when we love popping open the white wines and rosés. Why? Because we like quaffing cold nectar with those summer foods! But which to Serve? Here’s a thumbnail primer.

Chardonnay — It will always have a slight flavor of green apple. Sometimes strong like that jolly rancher we all used to suck on in math class when we were kids; other times it will be very subtle, more like an apple pie with a lot of pie spice on top. But look for it! It will be there.

There are two styles we ‘cork dorks’ like to talk about. “Old World” which is code for low fragrance, high and tart (like a green apple) acid that makes your mouth water. And a bit mineraly, like salt or chalk or slate. Then there’s “New World.” This can have a bit sweeter feel and can be very fragrant and comes across as fruitier, or “fruit forward”. A sub-category of “New World” wines is “California Style” or “Oaky” or “Buttery.” These wines are “New World” style but with a twist. They’ve soaked in different oak barrels for different lengths of time and have a second kind of yeast tossed in to add a bit of different flavor. This is called ‘malolactic fermentation’. “Malo” just like a ‘marshMALLOW’ and “Lactic” as in ‘lactic acid’ (Milk). The flavor of the wine takes on a buttery, almost apple pie flavor. These flavors come from the resins leaching out of the barrels. Flavors like spices of clove, cinnamon, mace, nutmeg, raisins, and other baking spices can be present.

Sauvignon Blanc — Also has a “Old World/New World” styles.

“Old World” — they’re French, namely Loire Valley and Bordeaux. Loire: they will have lemon zest and heavy minerals (chalk and slate). Bordeaux: High acid that cuts through butter sauce on lobster or crab. But, look for regions or village names. They usually are NOT named Sauvignon Blanc (It’s a French thing). Names like ‘Pouilie Fumé’ or ‘Sancerre’.

“New World” US — They can vary from grass to straw to citrus. Depending on the region they are grown. Grassy/Straw will go with hard cheeses, fruit, and things that are sweet or tart. Citrus styles compliment sauces or rubs that have citrus in them.

New Zealand — These are a tropical fruit bowl in a bottle. Grapefruit, passion fruit, mango, pineapple… anything that grows in the tropics. Big, bold and bursting with flavor.

Rosé — It’s not a varietal. Red skins are left on the juice for a short period of time. Some of the skin color leaches into the juice, giving color and tart flavor. Again, these are “New World/Old World” styles.

“Old World” style will have a tart cherry, under ripe strawberry and clean, minerally flavor. “New World” styles will vary from tart cherry and strawberry, to very sweet and low acid. Ask your wine geek!

There are many other white varietals perfect for summer! Riesling, Torrontes, Chenin Blanc, Muscat Gewürztraminer, Pinot Gris… Don’t just settle! Get out and try something new!

How Technology Can Give Your Home a Competitive Advantage

In today’s market, it’s important to be sure your home stands apart from the crowd, sparking buyers’ imaginations and enticing them to place a bid on your home. Incorporating technology is a surefire way to give your home a competitive edge against the other homes on the market. Although you may not recuperate 100 percent of the cost, having a few “toys” will definitely generate interest and ensure that buyers remember your home.

For example, impress buyers with an automated home control system. There are wireless systems available to fit any price range and need. Set lights to turn on every night while you’re away, or set them to turn on before someone enters the house. You can also automate other electrical appliances in the house too. The convenience and safety from programmable remotes and timers will boost your home’s appeal. Whoever buys your home will never have to return to a cold, dark home.

Entertainment additions usually catch a buyer’s eye as well. Flat panel TVs mounted on walls particularly draw attention. TVs don’t have to be large; there are plenty of sizes to fit any budget. Have your cable provider install the receiver or cable jack near the wall where you will be mounting the TV. Many buyers like small, flat panel TVs in the kitchen, near counter space. Consider this when planning to mount a screen around the kitchen or main floor of your home.

A whole-house audio system is also a nice feature. A multi-room sound system that lets you listen to the same music in all different parts of the house is appealing, especially in warmer weather. By wiring up the entire house, and adding some outdoor speakers near a patio, you could draw attention from music-loving buyers. Extra features such as a flat-screen TV or surround-sound system give your property a slight advantage in buyers’ minds. Although these additions may not be the ultimate reason your home sells, they will definitely help your house stand out.

Other tech-oriented ideas you may consider are a sensor-activated deadbolt lock, motorized drapes, or maybe even a weather forecaster. It’s all about what you can offer. Although it’s unnecessary to completely exceed your budget, having one or two fun features may give your home that little extra push needed to overcome your competitors.

Some homes may have a few of these technologies already, and if so, they will only stand to support your sales efforts. Whether adding anew or working with what you already have, speaking with a real estate professional about how to sell the many different aspects of your home is vital to your success.

As a Member of the Top 5 in Real Estate Network®, I have a wealth of real estate and homeownership information that may be of help to you.
